INTERNI LEGACY sets out to activate, in the world of design, project messages seen as memories for the future, expressed in installations whose only 'temporary' characteristic is the time span of their existence, linked to that of Design Week in Milan. The focus is on 'inheritance' in constructed form, stimuli for reflection on the state of design in the widest sense of the term, covering different scales and typologies, from micro-architecture to the urban landscape, interiors to furnishing objects.

LEGACY, then, means reflection on the possibilities for design to pass things on to the future, in terms of research, technologies, materials, figurative expression, but also from the viewpoint of the conscious gesture, connected to the culture of sustainability and reduction of waste, in the spaces of the home and those of the workplace, and in the urban space of the city.

INTERNI LEGACY gives concrete form, in a series of experimental installations made with the support of technologically advanced companies in the field of construction materials and environmental sustainability, to message-ideas capable of becoming signals of reference in the complex scenario of contemporary design and research on furnishings.

The INTERNI EVENT for 2012 on the theme of messages for the future approaches this perspective through installations created by a series of international designers that announce, also on a metaphorical and symbolic level, new possibilities, figures, typologies and solutions for the design of tomorrow.

The installations, each independent and complete in its own right, will be inserted in the following spaces of the State University of Milan:

- 1. Loggiato Est - 1st floor of the Honor Courtyard
- 2. Loggiato Ovest - 1st floor of the Honor Courtyard
- 3. 18th-century courtyard
- 4. Auditorium lobby
- 5. Cortile dei Bagni
- 6. Cortile Farmacia
- 7. Loggia del Richini
- 8. Central parterre of the Honor Courtyard

INTERNI LEGACY also operates to create a link between the two great Milanese works of architecture by Filarete (15th-century architect): the Ca' Granda - State University and Castello Sforzesco.

The Ca' Granda (now the State University of Milan) was a monumental health care complex founded in 1456 by Francesco Sforza and designed by the Tuscan architect Filarete (1400-1469), with subsequent work phases by outstanding names in the history of architecture. Its present situation is the result of an important project of restoration that began in 1953, under the guidance of the architects Piero Portaluppi and Liliana Grassi. The complex stands out for its courtyards, porticoes and loggias, with their extreme linguistic, formal and expressive complexity.

Castello Sforzesco was built in 1368 by Galeazzo Visconti, and took on its present name halfway through the 1400s, to commemorate its period of greatest splendor, reflected in its classical layout with courtyards (Cortile della Rocchetta, Corte Ducale, Corte delle Armi). The castle was restored in 1893 based on a project by Luca Beltrami (the work was completed in 1905 with the construction of the so-called Filarete Tower). Today the use of the spaces of the Castle – now the property of the City of Milan – for museum functions has been completed with the works of renovation of the exhibition areas of the complex, based on projects by Studio aMDL and Michele De Lucchi with David Chipperfield Architects.
